

SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION

REPTILE TRADING IN CAMEROON: SETTING BASELINES FOR MONITORING AND INTERVENTIONS

NONO LEGRAND GONWOUO AND THOMAS M. DOHERTY-BONE

The following material is provided by the authors and was not subjected to peer review or editing by Herpetological Conservation and Biology.

FIGURE S1. Monitor Lizard (Varanus niloticus) among other wild meat for sale in the wildlife market. (Photographed by Nono L. Gonwouo).

FIGURE S2. Gaboon viper (Bitis gabonica) among other wild meat for sale in the wildlife market. (Photographed by Nono L. Gonwouo).

FIGURE S3. Dried Crested Chameleon (Trioceros cristatus) exposed on the table of a traditional healer in the city of Yaoundé. (Photographed by Nono L. Gonwouo).

FIGURE S4. Left: Empty shells of the hingeback tortoises Kinixys sp., exposed on the table of a traditional healer in the city of Yaoundé. Note oil from pythons (Python sebae) in plastic bottles. (Photographed by Nono L. Gonwouo). Right: Live K. homeanea are also sold at these markets. (Photographed by T. Doherty-Bone).

FIGURE S5. Top: Photos of leather products for sale in the Craft market of Yaoundé made from skin of crocodiles, snakes and lizards. (Photographed by Nono L. Gonwouo). Bottom: A Varanus exanthematicus handbag. (photographed by T. Doherty-Bone).